

Weird and funny Javascript libraries that you have to try out!

ThanosJS

by anandundavia

Do you secretly wish you were Thanos with the power to wipe away half of humanity? ThanosJS promises to give you a taste of this. With this library, you can reduce the file size of your project down to 50% with a simple command.

The catch? It does this by deleting a random bunch of files.

Fartscroll.js

by theonion

Are you a 10 year old at heart who likes fart jokes? As the name suggests, this library allows you to insert fart noises while scrolling. You can even specify the frequency of your page-farts, as per your requirements.

The next time you get caught red-handed at your workplace? Just blame it on the website!

Elevator.js

by tholman

Do you hate scrolling to the top of a website? Do you want to provide a user experience that's as smooth as an elevator?

Elevator.js lets you add a "back to top" button on your website that behaves like a real elevator, with calm elevator music to make the journey to the top of the page more enjoyable.

Are you a fart-noise-scrolling kind of person or an elevator-scrolling kind of person?

ComcastifyJS

by theonion

With websites becoming speedier by the day, the sweet memories associated with waiting an eternity for a frustratingly slow website to load are fading away.

If you'd like to experience the good ol' days again, you can use this library to make....your....images....load....very.....slowly.